OFFICE: No. 15 Quincy Street. FRIDAY, JANUARY 5, 1872.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Register, who opposes the county subscription to the Pittaburgh, Wheeling & Kentucky Railroad, says: "I have no doubt this iniquity has received three-fifths of the vote oast at the polls yesterday. It has only gone through the first stages, however, as I am informed it waits some legislation before it can be fully consummated. It is not too late to nip the thing in the bud yet. I would advise that the proper steps be taken to prevent the subscription from being made.

lives now, at this late hour, it can be done."

If "Taxpayer" thinks he can stop further proceedings, let him try it. It is understood the trouble with "Taxpayer" is that he is afraid the opening of this road will cheapen the price of coal. We think this apprehension is well founded. We have no doubt that with such facilities for mining and bringing coal into the heart of the city as this road when completed will afford, better coal than we now get can be supplied in the city in unlimited quantities at 7 cents a bushel And that is price enough. There is no one thing in which Wheeling people suffer a greater extortion than in the price of coal. With the whole country around us full of coal, the monopoly of the available coal lands near the city, the combination of dealers to keep up the prices, and the lack of facilities for bringing coal from a distance, have for many years kept the price away above its natural and legitimate level. Everybody in the city is directly interested in having cheap coal "Taxpayer" will not find many people sympathize with his anxiety to prevent a setter supply and a consequent cheapen-

THE Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Com pany has succeeded in having an agree-ment with the Board of Supervisors of Ohio county and the city of Wheeling successfully carried, by which the con-pany is relieved from all corporation, township and State taxes on all their property in that county for the past, pres ent and future, in consideration of an ob-ligation to build and maintain manufac-turing shops at Wheeling to cost at least $100,000. The Board of Supervisors fur-ther agreed and bound themselves to indemnify the company in case the courts should declare the agreement null and void.—Purkersburg Times.

ing of a commodity that everybody uses.

The Times is not accurate. It makes three important mistakes. 1st-The ex emption granted the Railroad Company does not apply to "all 'their property. Real estate not used for the business o the road is not released. 2d-The Company's property is not exempted from State taxation. The Supervisors couldn't fly quite so high as that, 3d-The Super visors did not agree and bind themselves to indemnify the Company in case the courts should declare the agreement void The Times did not read carefully the reports made in the Wheeling papers in regard to this matter.

THE editor of the Moundsville Nation al is progressive and imaginative and sometimes uses beautiful figures in his editorials. Wheeling editors are apparen-tly destitute of imagination and censure the National man in a mild way while dving with envy to rival him.—Bellaire Independent.

During the storm of Sunday afternoon the house of Mr. A. Stewart, on the cor-ner of Sixth and Belmont streets, was struck with lightning, tearing a streak of shingles off the roof nearly a foot wide and from the chimney to the eave. Mrs. stewart was quite severely shocked, but her injuries, fortunately, were only temporary. The storm in the country, and especially on the hills, seems to have been very hard. In the house of Wm. Humes alone fifty-four lights of glass were broken out.

A very pleasant little presentation affair came off a tew days since at the Globe House, at which Mr. Robert Frazier, one of the oldest and most popular conductors on the Central Ohio Railroad, was made on the Central Onlo Railroad, was made the recipient of a magnificent lantern. The regular speeches were made, after which good wheer, both edible and bibible, was indulged in, and a jolly good time generally made the evening an exceeding-ly pleasant one to all concerned.

THE AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENT COM-THE AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENT Company has been in existence one year, and they now have a substantial three-story brick building 180 by 30 feet, foundry, paint shop, &c., with machinery in place, with capacity sufficient to turn out three reapers daily and three threshers weekly. They have taken a contract to make eight hundred of the "Smith" reaper next season, which alone will yield a profit of at least $20,000.

Sunday afternoon we had the some what unusual occurrence of a severe hall storm accompanied by very heavy thunarain storm with thunder and lightning enough for July or August. The hall of the afternoon were nearly as large as hick-ory nuts, and broke a number of windows in the upper part of the town.

TYPHOID FEVER.

BY STEPHEN SMITH, M. D., HEALTH COM-

Typhoid fever is the great autumnal scourge of our country. It attacks the high and the low, the rich and the poor, the resident of the country, village and city. The family of the most humble and lowly seems no more liable to it than the tamily of the most exalted in wealth and family of the most respect for the royal family of England than for the poor peas ant's household. Prince Albert fell a victim to it, and to-day the heir aparent is prostrated under its remorseless grasp. We may gain some idea of the vast harvest of sickness and death, which this reaper annually gathers from the follow-ing facts. It is estimated that from 100,-000 to 150,000 people annually suffer from this disease in England alone.

this disease in England alone.

The causation of typhold fever, though long enveloped in obscurity, is now well known. It is one of the so-called "filth diseases" of modern sanitary writers. It is nost ordinary exciting causes is air-or drinking-water belouled with excrement, all matters. It is also quite certain that a person suffering from this fever may himself infect the air of his room or the water which receives his exercise with general that a person suffering from this fever may himself infect the air of his room or the water which receives his exercise with general that a person suffering from this fever may himself infect the air of his room or the water which receives his exercise with general that a person suffering from this fever may himself infect the air of his room or the water which receives his exercise with general that a person suffering from this fever may himself infect the air of his room or the water which receives his exercise with general that a person suffering from this fever may himself infect the air of his room or the water than the cause of the causation of typhold fever, though long enveloped in obscurity, is now well known. It is one of the so-called "filth diseases" of modern sanitary writers. It is also quite certain that a person suffering from this fever may himself infect the air of his room or the water and the cause of the cause of ful source of a wide-spread epidemic.

The facts illustrating the origin of typhoids from excremental matters in drinkphoids from excremental matters in drink-ing-water are now very numerous and very instructive. Every experienced physician can give striking examples co-curring under his own observation. It not untrequently happens that the actual source of the disease is very obscure, and can only be discovered by the most per-sistent and intelligent inquiry; but the accentific student is generally rewarded with complete success. The following. with complete success. The following examples will illustrate the methods of communicating the fever:

In a small German settlement in the Euprepart of the city there was a severe outbreak of dysentery and typhoid fever. A physician, called to attend some of the cases, set to work to find out the cause. On inquiry as to the water-supply, he was directed to a spring on low ground in the On inquiry as to the water-supply, he was directed to a spring on low ground in the midst of the settlement, so situated as to receive the surface drainage. The water was pure and sparkling to the sight and the taste, and was loudly praised by the owner of the spring. A quantity put in a bottle and allowed to stand for a few hours threw down a thick sediment of most offensive matter. The people ceased to use this water, and the epidemic censed at once. ensed at once.

In a neighboring village typhoid fever broke out, and prevailed with yreat violence in a given locality. Search was made for the cause by the attending physician, but in vain. They appealed for aid from the health authorities of New York; and an expert officer examined the history of the outbreak, and the locality, and predicted that a certain hydrant, which supplied the victims with drinking water, commucicated at some point with house-drains or the street sewer. The water pipe was examined, and at a diswater pipe was examined, and at a distance from the hydrant a house-drain was found leaking into it at a point where they traversed each other. The repair of they traversed each other. The repair of these pipes was the cure of the epedemic. While visiting in an interior township of this State, famous for healthfulness and the beauty of its scener'y. I became interested in the history of a family which was suffering from typhoid fever. Of eight members five had perished, and one was then fatally sick. On visiting the locality, the house was found situated on an elevation, and all its surroundings. locally, the house was found situated on an elevation, and all its surroundings were admirably arranged for health. One could readily believe the statement that there had not been a case of sickness in the house for twelve years. The following history of the present sickness was given: A few weeks before the tever appeared the pump in the well broke, and the farmer, being driven with his work, neglected to have it repaired. Meantime, the servant brought the water from a spring at the foot of the hill, which soon became low, owing to the drought. He then resorted to a small brook, and from this source the family were supplied for two or three weeks. This stream, higher up, ran through several farm yards and received the surface drainage. The first symptoms of poison by this water was slight nausea and a mild diarrhea; after several days typhoid fever in its worst form was ushered in. Of the entire family but two escaped an attack, and they did not use the water. An examination of this water revealed a sediment of excremental matters.

The death of Prince Albert by typhoid fever gave rise to much discussion as the course of the poison. Expert sanitarians an elevation, and all its surroundings

The death of Prince Albert by typhoid fever gave rise to much discussion as the course of the poison. Expert sanitarians contended that he had been exposed to sewer gasses, or their equivalent. Court physicians denied that there was any possibility of such exposure at Windsor Castle, where he had spent several weeks preceding the attack. A careful search twas made of the drains, sewers, etc., of the Castle, but no leakage or possible escape of gasses could be discovered. At length an old sewer map of the district was consulted, and it was found that before the Castle was built an old sewer ran across the grounds, draining an adjacent settlement. The sewer was now explored, and at a point directly under the fibrary, where the Prince spent much of his time, there was a break, allowing the escape of sewer-gases directly into the library.

One of the most important become for brary.

One of the most important lessons for One of the most important lessons for households to learn is that excremental matters polluting the air they breathe, or the water they drink, will cause typhoid fever. It should be called "excrement fever," so that when the name is spoken every one is reminded of its cause. Far too little attention is given to this most fruitful source of sickness, and death in cities, towns, villages and by country residents. Excremental matters should be at once disposed of, so that they cannot by any possibility taint the air we breathe, or the water we drink. This may readily be effected by disinfectants, of which the best is dry earth. Drinking water should always be taken from wells or springs situated above the level of human habitations, or so deeply, as artesian man habitations, or so deeply, as artesian wells, that they cannot receive surface drainage.

enough for July or August. The half of the atternoon were nearly as large as hick ory nuts, and broke a number of windows in the upper part of the town.

The Blood-Red Flao.—A speaker at the meeting of the International workingmen's society in New York city on Sunday said that the red flag did not mean bloodshed and rebellion. "It is the conterence flag of the the workingmen, not the flag of nationalists or countries, but the consolidated emblem of all the working classes—the emblem of honest labor. It was well known in the old Roman time, the color is taken from blood and means vigor and manliness. It is peace until it is insulted, and then becomes vengeance."
The red flag means something else in England, if a London correspondent of the New York World is to be believed. He says the incendiary reds of London are sowing the seeds of a bloody revolution, and in a pamiphlet printed "in red ink" at "The International Printing Office," it is hinted that the poor should rise and massacre the rich.
